PLANT NOW!

Did you know that now is still an excellent time for planting? For many trees, shrubs, and evergreens, planting can be done until solid freeze-up! It is important to add that when planting late in the season, water thoroughly to ensure that your plants freeze wet. This is also important for anything planted within the last year. Planting now will allow trees and shrubs to settle in while it is relatively dormant. As the plant awakens from its dormant state in early spring, it is already in its new environment and is better equipped to prepare for the hotter periods we experience during the summer.

Deciduous trees that have dropped their leaves will draw less water and nutrients from the roots, thereby allowing quicker recovery in cases of transplant shock.

Now is also an excellent time for moving most trees and shrubs from one location of your yard to another. When transplanting, dig up your plant keeping as much of the roots and surrounding soil in tact as possible. Then gently place the plant into its new location, filling in the remaining area with fresh triple mix, providing fresh nutrients for root growth. Water thoroughly.

Not confident in planting or transplanting yourself? Give us or any landscape professional a call. There's still time!

Last year’s workshop produced some beautiful arrangements from people who thought “they weren’t creative”, but proved themselves wrong!
